Letter from Secretary Aguilar

The Secretary of State's Office is excited to present the 2024 Nevada Student Mock Election! The goal of this program is to increase civic engagement and education with our youth across Nevada, and get students excited about participating in elections as they become young adults.

Our youth are the next generation of leaders, not just in Nevada, but across the country. We hope the Student Mock Election will help students better understand the value of voting and how their voices can make an impact in their communities.

Thank you for participating in the Nevada Student Mock Election!

Francisco V. Aguilar
Nevada Secretary of State

A Message from the Advisory Committee on Participatory Democracy & the Youth Advisory Task Force

Advisory Committee on Participatory Democracy

"Tell me and I forget, teach me and I may remember, involve me and I learn." Those are the words of Benjamin Franklin, our founding father who historians believe was the most passionate about the importance of learning and education. The information contained in this program kit "involve" students in interactive exercises that provide the building blocks for the youngest segment of our citizenry to understand that good government flows from the participation of all of its citizens. The Advisory Committee on Participatory Democracy (ACPD)* wholeheartedly supports the student mock elections program and is appreciative of the efforts of Secretary of State Aguilar and his team to ensure the program's continued success during a very busy election year. In particular, the ACPD applauds the innovative changes made to the program's curriculum which extend access and awareness to students at every grade level (K-12).

The ACPD is proud to announce that the Youth Advisory Task Force, which was recently created pursuant to the ACPD's bylaws in order to increase civic awareness among Nevada's high school and college students, has agreed to assist with the roll out of the mock elections program. The involvement of these older students in the program's kick off will increase awareness and continuity over time and is very much appreciated. Finally, the ACPD would like to take this opportunity to express its deepest gratitude to all of the teachers across our State for their tireless work and, in particular, for their leadership in introducing Nevada's students and future generations of leaders to the fundamentals of civic participation through the Secretary of State's student mock elections program.

Youth Advisory Task Force

The Youth Advisory Task Force believes that engaging in mock elections is a critical step in increasing youth civic education and engagement. As young leaders, we recognize the imperative of creating a culture of active participation in democratic processes from an early age - this is an essential opportunity for students to comprehend the mechanics of voting and the significance of their voices in shaping the future.

Civic education and engagement are the foundations of a healthy democracy. Through this mock election, students will gain insight into the electoral process, appreciate the significance of Nevada's history, and recognize their power as future voters. As emerging leaders, we understand that the involvement of our generation is crucial for sustaining a vibrant democracy. Participation in such activities nurtures informed and active citizenship, laying the groundwork for a stronger and more dynamic society.

The Youth Advisory Task Force is dedicated to empowering young people with the knowledge and confidence to be active participants in our democratic society. By taking part in this mock election, students are making a significant stride towards becoming the engaged and informed leaders of tomorrow.

* The ACPD and YATF are non-political and non-partisan groups created by the Nevada State legislature to support the Nevada Secretary of State's efforts to promote citizen participation in governance and the democratic process.

Voting Process: Distribute mock ballots and explain the voting process.

Objective: Apply knowledge of elections by participating in a simulated voting process.

2. Counting Ballots and Reflection

Counting Ballots: Count the votes and announce the winner of the mock election.

Reflection Prompt: How did it feel to participate in the mock election? What did you learn about the election process?

Objective: Reflect on the experience and discuss insights gained from the mock election.

3. Reflection and Extension

Reflection Activity: Have students write a reflection on their experience participating in the mock election.

Extension Task: Research a current event related to elections or civic engagement and write a brief summary or opinion piece.

Objective: Reflect on learning and explore further engagement with civic topics.

Additional Resources: Scaffolds

Day 1: Introduction to Elections

Objective: Students will understand the basic concepts of elections and the importance of civic participation.

1. Opening Discussion

Scaffold: Discuss in pairs: "What do you know about elections?" Share responses with the class.

Prompt: Why do you think it's important for people to vote in elections?

2. Presentation and Vocabulary

Scaffold: Present slides or a short video explaining the election process. Introduce election-related vocabulary such as candidate, voter, ballot, etc.

Prompt: Can someone explain what a 'ballot' is in their own words?

3. Reading and Discussion

Scaffold: Assign readings or articles about the importance of voting and civic engagement.

Prompt: What are some ways people can participate in their community besides voting?

4. Writing Activity

Scaffold: Have students write a paragraph explaining why voting is important. Provide sentence starters or graphic organizers if needed.

Prompt: In your paragraph, include one reason why you think voting is important.

Day 2: Understanding the Election Process

Objective: Students will learn about the steps involved in an election and the responsibilities of voters.

1. Presentation and Discussion

Scaffold: Present slides or visuals explaining the election process, including registration, campaigning, voting, and counting ballots.

Prompt: What are some ways candidates try to convince people to vote for them?

2. Reading and Analysis

Scaffold: Assign readings about the history of elections or specific voting procedures.

Prompt: What did you learn from the reading about how elections have changed over time?

3. Group Activity

Scaffold: Divide students into small groups and have them create a flowchart or timeline of the election process.

Prompt: Discuss with your group: What steps are necessary for a fair and transparent election?

4. Writing Reflection

Scaffold: Have students write a reflection on what they've learned about the election process. Provide guiding questions if needed.

Prompt: Reflect on the election process and write about one step you found interesting.

Day 3: Mock Election Day

Objective: Students will apply their understanding of elections by participating in a mock election.

1. Candidate Presentations and Voting

Scaffold: Allow students to present their campaign posters and slogans. Provide a structured format for speeches.

Prompt: Listen to each candidate's speech. What qualities do you think make a good leader?

2. Counting Ballots and Reflection

Scaffold: Count the votes and announce the winner of the mock election. Have students reflect on the experience.

Prompt: How did it feel to participate in the mock election? What did you learn about the election process?

3. Reflection and Extension

Scaffold: Have students write a final reflection on what they've learned about elections and civic responsibility.

Prompt: Looking back on our unit, what is one thing you will remember about elections? How might you apply what you've learned in the future?
